5. Metodology

Course Approach

The course will be organized in a way that provides the students with practical knowledge and hands-on experiences, which will prepare them to interact successfully in the English language on a variety of environmental-tourism topics. Classroom time will be subdivided into the following parts:

A. Public speaking

Activities will be developed to teach listeners how to be sensitive to their needs and interests, and how to talk to and with them, and not at them. Students will be encouraged to communicate ideas to real people, rather than merely stand up and go through the motions of “giving a speech”. Practical activities that demonstrate how to effectively produce a persuasive speech will be carried out in class.

B. Grammar and pronunciation

There will be weekly reviews of grammar and pronunciation aspects from the course anthology. Practice on the following grammatical structures will be provided: past perfect, passive voice, tag questions, second conditional.

Practice on the following pronunciation aspects will be provided: /æ/, /ɔ/, /ə/, /θ/, /ð/, word stress, sentence stress and final consonant sounds.

C. Field trip

The field trip will be held on April 20th-21st, and it will imply careful, systematic preparation. The destination will be Reserva Los Campesinos (<http://www.reservaloscampesinos.com>). The main goal is for the students to propose a tourism interpretation in the English language of one of the options available at the site. The students will also talk about different measures or guidelines they would follow as managers of the project (how will the resources will be used? Which certifications or standards would they pursue? How would the staff need to be trained?). As a second activity, the students will participate in a group discussion about the strengths and weaknesses of the project visited. Appropriate guidelines will be provided before the field trip.

D. Project:

In pairs, students will analyze the tourist potential of a real site. They will propose a tourist project that takes into account the specific characteristics (infrastructure, weather, accommodation, attractions, and location, among others) of the place. The instructor and the students will meet to discuss the advances of the project before the final presentation at least two times. The final presentation must be developed in a persuasive tone where the group tries to convince the audience (their classmates, and guest professors) to invest in their project (potential investors). This presentation is formal, professional and very persuasive.

E. Oral presentations on scientific articles:

ESP (English for specific purposes). During every class the students will present an article related to a topic from the contents of the course. This will allow the students to get in contact with specific vocabulary related to the tourism field. The chosen article has to be approved by the professor at least two weeks before presenting. Other sources might be consulted as well to complement the information from the article. The presentations must be very dynamic and well-organized. The topics have to be addressed critically from a current perspective. Students are expected to incorporate the principles of public speaking in these demonstrations. Besides, they should prepare a short activity for the group to grasp the content of each article and assimilate its main ideas. Students will upload the article and a summary of it for the rest of the class to read before the class. This summary will also include key vocabulary related to the topic that will be used in the presentation (the terms and their meaning). The day of the presentation, the rest of the class will bring 3 possible discussion questions to be used in a question-answer exchange, where points of view about the topic at hand are developed. This will be a follow-up activity.

F. Reading comprehension oral reaction: At the end of each lesson the students will be expected to express their position towards the scientific article and the topic itself, considering the points expressed in the presentation and what they read at home. This must be done orally, and the student chosen must give a substantial comment that develops her or his opinion about one of the aspects of the topic. When necessary, the student will be asked to take a position and defend it with appropriate ideas (short persuasive speech or debate).

G. In-class tasks: five graded-in-class-tasks will be carried out during the course they will be based on the topic selected for the lesson.

1. A talk show: the class will be divided in two groups, one group of students will assume the role of authorities in the field of Tourism Management. Another group will act as the audience, they will be in charge of asking questions to the people in the panel (Authorities) creating this way a discussion. For example students may search a video related to the topic and then organize the discussion based on the main points of the video.
2. Debate: (previous preparation needed) Based on the topic of the day, students will decide on two opposing facts, ideas, or positions, regarding the Hotel Industry in Costa Rica, then they will organize and present a debate.
3. Persuasive Speech: (previous preparation needed) Each student will present a four minute persuasive speech about which Costa Rican natural species should be best protected.
4. Round table: after all the oral presentations of the course, students will organize and present a round table based on the main points of all the presentations.

Each evaluation task in this course will be graded using the corresponding rubric, which will be available in a Dropbox file.
